

REPLACEMENT PROGRAMS FOR PENNSYLVANIA GOVERNOR'S SCHOOLS OF EXCELLENCE

In 2009, due to budgetary issues, it was decided that the Pennsylvania Governor's Schools of Excellence would be cut.

This year, two colleges have chosen to continue to offer programs that will replace the former Governor's School programs that had been offered at their schools. The programs are as follows:

The PA School for Global Entrepreneurship at Lehigh University – open to current 10th and 11th grade students – information at www.iacoca-lehigh.org and click High School Program

The University of Pittsburgh Health Career Scholars Academy – open to current 11th grade students – information at www.hcsa.pitt.edu

Both programs have a highly competitive selection process and are intended for superior students. The application process is lengthy and complicated, so interested students should begin the process soon. The cost for both programs is to be born by the student/family.

Information brochures and applications can be picked up in the Guidance Office. To meet the postmark deadline, applications must be returned to Guidance by January 22, 2010.
